Description

This impressive patinated terracotta bust of Apollo is inspired by the famous models of classical Greco-Roman sculpture and reinterpreted in the neoclassical style that characterized European decorative sculpture between the 19th and 20th centuries. The figure represents the god Apollo, a symbol of harmony, beauty, and perfection in classical art. The idealized face, sideways gaze, and rich, wavy hair create a composition of great balance and elegance. The sculpture is distinguished by its finely modeled details, visible in the curls of the hair, the draped cloak, and the decorative fibula holding the drapery at the shoulder. The surface features a warm, bronze-colored patina that enhances the volumes and gives depth to the material. Crafted in terracotta, a material
