Description

A bronze table clock, France 19th century. The composition features a refined circular dial with Roman numerals, framed by rich gilt-bronze decoration. Above the dial is a lyre motif, a symbol of the arts and music, while the sides are adorned with elegant decorative figures: on one side, a winged female figure, likely a muse or allegory of art, and on the other, a putto, creating a dramatic yet harmonious ensemble. The architectural base, with ornamental appliqués and decorated feet, lends balance and presence to the overall design. The quality of the bronze casting and engraving demonstrates the meticulous craftsmanship typical of French production of the period.ref. 599/390
