Description

Elegant countertop display case in brass and glass, typical of the display cases used in shops and jewelry stores at the beginning of the 20th century. Rectangular in shape, it is made with a finely assembled brass structure accommodating glass panels on all sides as well as a glass back, allowing perfect visibility of the displayed objects. This type of display case was designed to showcase jewelry, watches, precious objects, or curiosities on a shop counter. Its clean lines and quality craftsmanship make it a highly sought-after decorative piece today, ideal for displaying collectibles, in an antique shop window, or in a home. The natural patina of the brass and the transparency of the glass give it an elegant and timeless aesthetic. Period: early 20th century. Material: brass and glass. Dimensions:
