Description

A rare matched set of a two-seat and three-seat sofa designed by the renowned Italian architect and designer Vico Magistretti and produced by Cassina in 1990. Together, these pieces form a harmonious ensemble that reflects the quiet sophistication, sculptural clarity, and functional elegance that define Magistretti's contribution to modern Italian design. Magistretti's work is celebrated for its ability to merge architectural discipline with inviting softness. This set embodies that philosophy: low, generous silhouettes; rounded armrests that flow seamlessly into the frame; and deep, plush cushions that offer both comfort and visual warmth. The two sofas share identical proportions and detailing, creating a cohesive presence when placed together in a living space. Upholstered in a textured dark fabric, both pieces display light, even discoloration; a natural patina that comes with age and use. The cushions remain supportive and enveloping, and the internal structures are solid, reflecting Cassina's uncompromising production standards. Every seam, curve, and proportion speaks to the brand's mastery of modern upholstery.
