Description

The work is distinguished by its highly characteristic pictorial construction, characterized by broad brushstrokes and horizontal planes of color, particularly visible in the treatment of the face and background. This pictorial style strongly evokes the manner of the painter Jac Martin-Ferrières, notably in the structuring of the paint and the subtly nuanced palette. The figure is depicted in bust form, wearing a dark jacket over a light shirt, against a sketched landscape in which a balustrade and a body of water are discernible, lending the scene an atmosphere that is both intimate and meditative. The deliberately synthetic treatment of forms and the vibrant texture situate the work within a modern pictorial sensibility of the first third of the 20th century. The canvas was relined in the mid-20th century, which has ensured its overall good preservation.

Note: - two slight dents are visible on the surface, and there is some old repainting, particularly in the black areas in the lower left corner. (A signature was potentially located here) -Minor, localized losses of paint. These elements remain discreet and do not detract from the aesthetic appeal of the work. An expressive and decorative painting, representative of French painting between the two World Wars. Technique: oil on canvas. Period: circa 1930. Condition: relined, slight dents, small repaints and losses.
