Description

The Treatise Concerning the History of France, namely the condemnation of the Templars with some related acts, the history of the schism during the siege of Avignon, and some criminal trials, is a work composed by Pierre Dupuy (1582-1651), an important French scholar and jurist. Close to President de Thou and Pierre de L'Estoile, he was commissioned by the Attorney General of the Parliament of Paris, Mathieu Molé, to inventory the archives, which brought him into contact with the valuable documents of major trials. He then wrote, among other works, this history of the condemnation of the Templars, followed by a catalog of the trial documents. As was often the case, other studies were added to make a substantial volume, such as the history of the Avignon schism and the trial of the Duke of
