Description

This Italian antique dresser from the mid-18th century features a solid walnut top and sides. The walnut burl veneer applied to the drawer fronts shows the lively and irregular grain typical of the period, with a uniform tone and very good preservation. The iron hardware consists of shaped escutcheons and small turned knobs. The proportions are regular and well balanced, with width and depth consistent with Venetian production of the time. The surfaces display an authentic antique patina with normal signs of age. Thanks to its solid structure, clean lines, and the warm tones of walnut, this dresser is suitable for a variety of interior settings, both classic and contemporary.
