Description

Watercolor on paper depicting a lively scene in an African village. The composition features a European figure, dressed in colonial attire and wearing a wide-brimmed hat, dancing in the center of a group of villagers gathered around the stage. The man holds up a bottle as the spectators watch the dance in a festive atmosphere. In the background, traditional dwellings and a mountainous landscape suggest a rural sub-Saharan African setting. The artist uses a vibrant, contrasting palette and precise drawing to animate the scene and structure the space around the figures. This type of representation corresponds to the ethnographic and colonial imagery produced by some European artists and illustrators at the turn of the 20th century, a period during which scenes of travel and
