Description

An elegant mokko-gata sword hilt, crafted from deep black patinated shakudo, rests on a finely worked and remarkably even nanako background. The takabori decoration depicts a stylized Virginia creeper with trilobed leaves and sinuous tendrils. Some leaves and buds are highlighted with gilded zogan-style metal inlays, providing a subtle contrast to the dark patina of the metal. The consistent treatment of both sides and the quality of the nanako suggest a production influenced by the Nara school.
