Description

A charming oil on canvas signed by Ambroise Rakoto and dated 1959, depicting a scene of daily life in a Malagasy village. The composition shows several traditional thatched huts arranged along a dirt path enlivened by the presence of figures. In the foreground, women are busy around a mortar, while other inhabitants move between the dwellings, bringing the scene to life. Tropical vegetation, composed of palm trees and lush foliage, frames the village and stands out against a bright blue sky dotted with white clouds, accurately capturing the light and atmosphere of Madagascar. The brushwork is lively and expressive, with a harmonious palette blending luminous blues, warm ochres, and tropical greens, characteristic of Malagasy scenes of daily life from the mid-20th century.
