Description

A charming rosewood marquetry table dating from the late 19th century. It immediately captivates with the elegance of its lines and the finesse of its craftsmanship. This piece perfectly reflects the expertise of the cabinetmakers of the period, where every detail was worked with care and precision. The table's structure is made of rosewood, a noble wood particularly prized for its rich grain and deep color. Its delicate construction testifies to high-quality workmanship and exceptional craftsmanship. The gently curved tabletop has an elegant shape that brings movement and lightness to the whole. The edge of the tabletop is highlighted by a gilt brass border that frames the surface with refinement. This metallic trim enhances the lines of the piece while adding a luminous and precious touch. the center and around the tabletop, a band of hardwood enriches the decorative composition. The surface is adorned with abundant floral marquetry. The plant motifs are finely executed and form a harmonious and delicate design. Each flower and leaf contributes to a refined decorative composition that draws the eye without ever overwhelming the piece. This marquetry is not limited to the tabletop; it extends elegantly along all four sides of the table. Thanks to this continuous design, the table can be placed freely in the center of a room and admired from every angle. At the front, a long, discreet drawer is seamlessly integrated into the apron. This drawer offers practical storage space while maintaining the table's aesthetic balance. Its subtle integration in no way disrupts the purity of the lines. The cabriole legs lend considerable grace to the whole. Their elegant curve adds dynamism and evokes the great classics of French furniture. At both the knees and feet, gilt bronze mounts enrich the decoration. These bronze ornaments provide a refined contrast to the rosewood. They accentuate the curves of the legs while reinforcing the precious character of the piece. The gilt bronze work also testifies to the high quality of the finish. This table can easily find its place in various interior styles. It would be ideal in a living room, office, or elegant entryway. It can also be used as a decorative side table or small desk. Its proportions are harmonious and practical for everyday use. Its dimensions are 113.5 cm long, 67 cm deep, and 74 cm high. These measurements make it a piece of furniture that is both elegant and functional. The table is in good overall condition. It retains all its charm and period authenticity. It is a beautiful decorative piece for lovers of antique furniture and refined marquetry. You can follow me on Instagram by following this link:
