Description

Beautifully preserved, these two Italian Art Deco stools from the early 1920s, crafted from richly toned walnut, exemplify the sculptural elegance that characterized the first wave of Italian Art Deco design. Combining architectural lines, warm materials, and refined craftsmanship, they form a harmonious and decorative ensemble. Each stool has a distinctive silhouette, with elegantly curved supports rising from a square base to the upholstered seat. The interplay of flowing curves and assertive geometric forms is typical of Art Deco: modern, expressive, and rooted in the tradition of woodworking. The walnut frames reveal a deep, warm grain that lends them a natural richness and visual depth. Both stools retain their original 1920s fabric, a textured textile in warm tones that beautifully complements the walnut. The upholstery shows slight signs of wear, normal for its age, which add authenticity and charm without compromising its functionality. The walnut frames have been professionally restored, enhancing the clarity and luster of the wood while preserving the authenticity of the original craftsmanship. The result: a pair of glasses that is both modern and refined, retaining the soul and patina of a century-old model.
