Description

Antique mahogany planter, Empire period - 19th century. This elegant antique mahogany planter, cylindrical in shape and resting on an octagonal base, dates from the 19th century. This decorative piece showcases fine craftsmanship with flamed mahogany offering a beautiful depth of grain. The interior is fitted with a removable zinc liner, allowing for a plant or shrub while protecting the wood from moisture. Its simple and elegant form makes it suitable for both classic and contemporary interiors. This type of planter was often used in bourgeois living rooms to hold ornamental plants, orange trees, palms, or floral arrangements. Characteristics Type: cachepot / planter / plant stand Period: 19th century Material: mahogany Interior: removable zinc liner Shape: cylindrical Base: octagonal base
