Description

A charming 19th-century pencil drawing depicting the Château de Duingt (also known as Châteaueux) on Lake Annecy in Haute-Savoie. The work is signed A. de Courville in the lower left corner and belongs to the oeuvre of Alfred Bernard de Courville (1816-1875), a brigadier general and former student of the École Polytechnique, known for his landscape drawings and watercolors created during his travels. The composition shows the château situated on its peninsula, surrounded by lush vegetation, with the Alpine peaks in the background. The delicate handling of line and tonal values reflects a careful observation of the landscape and is in keeping with the tradition of picturesque views created by traveling artists in the mid-19th century. Located between the Grand and Petit Lac d'Annecy, the
