Description

An interesting painting depicting a battle scene, executed in oil on poplar panel and framed in a contemporary boxwood frame. The skilled battle painter demonstrates his skill in depicting the scene in all its splendor and movement within the confines of the round support. Dense, stringy brushstrokes characterize the artist's verve in handling the highlights and certain details of the characters depicted in the throes of defending their uncertain fate. Oil on panel, second half of the 17th century. By or around Antonio Calza (Verona, 1658-1725). Diameter 30 cm; Diameter with contemporary frame 34 cm. We include a certificate of authenticity with the sale.
