Description

A charming original terracotta group depicting a seated woman with her young daughter. The work is signed Becher and dated 1898. The scene, imbued with tenderness and naturalism, shows a mother engaged in a domestic activity while the child stands beside her, participating in the scene. The piece sensitively conveys a moment of everyday family life, a theme much appreciated in late 19th-century sculpture. The modeling is lively and spontaneous, revealing the artist's hand in the clay. The volumes are rendered with fluidity and realism, while the figures' poses express a tender relationship between mother and child. This terracotta is an original, displaying a beautiful natural patina acquired with age. The base is free-form, in the style of late 19th-century sculptors' sketches and studies. Signature: Signed
