Description

A satin-finished crystal vase produced by the renowned French manufacturer Lalique, the Ispahan model, designed by Marc Lalique in 1952. The vase features a refined decoration of roses, branches, and thorns in high relief that envelops the entire body, creating a delicate contrast between the satin and polished surfaces of the crystal. This model represents one of the classics of post-war Lalique production, characterized by a strong naturalistic inspiration and the sculptural quality typical of the house. Signed "Lalique France" engraved on the base.
