Description

Description This original pencil sketch dated 1938 depicts the seafront at Brighton, England, with the Royal Albion Hotel and Brighton Pier rendered in fine, observational line work. The composition shows the lively promenade and roadway leading toward the waterfront, with cyclists, vehicles, and small figures captured through light, economical strokes that suggest movement and daily activity along the coast. Architectural details of the historic hotel and the pier extending over the sea are carefully outlined, while subtle touches of color and soft shading evoke the atmosphere of Brighton's bustling seaside in the late 1930s. Penton Hook sketch on reverse. Artist Artist unknown. Artist Details This drawing appears to be a topographical study created from observation, focusing on the
