Description

Théodore Levigne (1848-1912) Lively Landscape with Cows - Pasture Scene Oil on canvas, signed lower right "Levigne T." A very beautiful pastoral scene by Théodore Levigne, a French painter born in 1848 in Noirétable and trained at the École des Beaux-Arts in Lyon, whose work is rooted in the 19th-century naturalist tradition. The artist is known for his lively rural landscapes, in which he accurately depicts peasant life and animals in a calm and harmonious environment. The composition presented here is a perfect illustration of this: in the foreground, several cattle drink at a watering hole, rendered with naturalism and keen observation. Their presence structures the scene and immediately captures the viewer's attention. A dirt path then leads the eye to an open landscape, punctuated by a country house and discreet human figures. Lush vegetation frames the composition, while in the background, gently bluish hills add depth and perspective. The expansive sky, dotted with wispy clouds, diffuses a soft light that unifies the whole. The rendering of reflections in the water and the richness of the natural tones demonstrate a fine mastery of painting, characteristic of 19th-century Lyon landscape artists. The signature "Levigne T." in the lower right corner corresponds to known variations of the artist's work and confirms its authenticity. Molded wooden frame. Note: a small, old loss in the wooded area, discreet and inconspicuous, does not detract from the overall impression. A high-quality decorative work, representative of Théodore Levigne's style, sought after for its bucolic charm and soothing atmosphere.
