Description

Etching on paper depicting a reclining tiger in a restrained and taut composition, centered on the animal. The print is signed in pencil in the margin, monogrammed HD in the plate, and dated 1920. The linework and the silent tension of the scene are characteristic of the British tradition of early 20th-century animal art. Herbert Thomas Dicksee (1862-1942) is known for his depictions of felines and wild animals in a naturalistic style, attentive to anatomy and the animal's presence. This etching exemplifies this interest in observation and graphic effectiveness. The work is presented in a high-quality frame, in good condition, which enhances the sheet and is a true asset to any display. Overall, it is in fine condition. The paper has a slight patina consistent with its age.
