Description

Finely carved wooden sculpture depicting a dragon with grotesque features. This highly fanciful creature is characterized by an elongated body, feathered wings, and a tail resembling that of a marine creature, while the snout features pointed ears and a long tongue. The tail ends in a carved shell that can be used as a catchall tray. The base is carved to resemble rocky ground. Its height of 120 cm and the quality of this rare depiction make it a distinctive piece for an entrance hall or living room.
