Description

A charming set of three master's chairs in finely openwork and carved wood. Each piece features openwork decoration with scroll and volute motifs, with a backrest crafted in the same style as the seat, demonstrating meticulous cabinetmaking. These chairs, made on a small scale, were traditionally made by apprentices or journeymen to showcase their technical skill. The delicacy of the decoration and the regularity of the carving highlight a fine mastery of woodworking. The chairs have cabriole legs and a light yet stable structure. The antique patina, with consistent signs of wear, adds charm and authenticity to the set. Good condition
