Description

This generously proportioned drawing of a young nude woman seen from behind is a sensual sanguine drawing from around 1925, which could be attributed to the Art Deco period. A quality work, this woman stands in carefully chosen light, her contours beautifully defined. A charming piece in its original light oak frame bordered by a delicate frieze of gilded stucco palmettes. All of this allows us to appreciate this lovely sanguine drawing, so gentle and harmonious; a perfectly preserved, high-quality piece; an original work from the early 20th century with soft tones in a carefully chosen atmosphere.
