Description

A magnificent 18th-century piece of furniture. The rosewood is enhanced by green and boxwood stringing, all framed with projecting decorative elements. The mahogany-clad uprights are accentuated by the rosewood's cross-grain finish. The understated elegance of the design is achieved through discreet bronze knobs that contrast with the typical wooden gallery of the period. The keyhole escutcheon is decorated with laurel leaves. The entire piece is finished with bronze sabots. A rare model. Delivery is possible but not included in the price.
