Description

An elegant sculptural bust depicting Apollo, god of light, arts, and harmony, crafted from fine white statuary marble. This work, an 18th-century Italian creation, stands out for its refined craftsmanship and formal balance, reminiscent of the models of ancient classicism, so highly regarded in the artistic culture of the period. The god's face, turned sideways, is characterized by idealized and harmonious features, with a serene and detached gaze that evokes the ideal of timeless beauty. The rendering of the hair, richly sculpted with movement and depth, testifies to the sculptor's technical expertise, while the soft drapery enveloping the shoulders contributes to the composition's dynamism and naturalness. The finely crafted marble surface retains a patina consistent with the work's age, enhanced by
