Description

An elegant oil on canvas depicting a still life of flowers in a vase, accompanied by fruit, in a refined, classically inspired composition. The richly blooming bouquet (roses, peonies, and other garden flowers) stands out against a dark background enlivened by drapery and an architectural element (a column), adding depth and contrast to the whole. The subtle and nuanced palette, as well as the delicate treatment of light, evoke the taste of 19th-century still lifes, in the tradition of European decorative painting. The work is presented in its original carved and gilded wooden frame, adorned with floral motifs, which elegantly highlights the composition. Period: 19th century. Technique: Oil on canvas. Subject: Floral still life. Frame: Original carved and gilded wood, some wear consistent with age.
