Description

A charming alabaster sculpture depicting two children playing checkers. This anonymous work is in the style of early 20th-century Italian creations. The two children, a girl and a boy, are chubby and plump, concentrating intently on placing their next piece. The game board and checkers are well-proportioned. This sculpture is truly exceptional, most likely a unique commissioned piece to immortalize the children of the family. There are some losses and breaks; the boy's right arm has been previously reattached, and his fingers have been repaired with plaster. Some of the checkers have been reattached with traces of old glue. A very decorative piece. It weighs between 15 and 25 kg. Italy, early 20th century.
