Description

Black Forest, Austria or Germany, 19th century
This mounted stag, carved from wood, is an antique piece from the Black Forest. Its almost anthropomorphic expression makes it a curiosity. The nice sculpture of the king of the forest seems very human, bringing to life the Roman legends of metamorphosis. Intriguing and striking, it commands a remarkable presence in any room. This stag displays a beautiful patina and a subtle sheen. It is in good condition considering its age and material. One stable line on the face, and there may be (perhaps it was made this way originally) small pieces missing from the tips of the antlers. These flaws are barely noticeable. Dimensions: 32 x 24 x 15 cm / 684 g
