Description

A beautiful rectangular ebony frame, in the center of which is a fine Louis-Philippe period porcelain portrait of a man. This charming and amusing representation is typical of the period, where the head is slightly oversized to enhance the expressiveness of the face. In a successful composition, this handsome portrait of a seated man in formal attire possesses all the qualities and charm of this Romantic period (circa 1840). A refined and highly successful collector's piece, of a good size and mounted on a support that enhances the detail... the porcelain border, surrounded by a lovely chased bronze molding, adds light and emphasizes the contrast with the frame. A skillfully crafted and highly realistic portrait, decorative and in perfect condition. A perfect addition to any miniature collection.
