Description

A Boulle marquetry and gilt bronze portico clock - Napoleon III period - 19th century. An elegant Napoleon III period portico clock, made in the 19th century in the style of Louis XIV models. The architectural structure rests on four twisted columns of blackened wood, rhythmically framing a richly ornamented circular dial in gilt bronze. The dial features finely chased decoration, embellished with a mascarons at the top and a shell motif at the bottom. The white enamel dial with Roman numerals is marked with two openings for winding and retains its original gilt bronze hands. The whole is surmounted by an entablature decorated with Boulle marquetry, combining scrolls and floral motifs in brass on a tortoiseshell or imitation tortoiseshell background. The base, also adorned with
