Description

An elegant Art Nouveau female bust, crafted in spelter with a bronze-green patina and signed P. Rigual. The sculpture depicts a young woman with a delicate smile, adorned with a rich, stylized floral motif, characteristic of the naturalistic aesthetic of the 1900s. The supple modeling, the fineness of the features, and the fluid treatment of the volumes reflect high-quality decorative work, typical of the period. The piece rests on a circular black marble base, providing an elegant contrast and a solid foundation. Pedro Rigual, active around 1900, is known for his decorative sculptures in the Art Nouveau style, particularly spelter female busts with supple, naturalistic lines. A charming decorative piece, emblematic of the Art Nouveau taste.
