Description

We are pleased to present this early 20th-century oil painting on plywood panel. This splendid painting, a scene of everyday life in the park, is signed lower right, but the artist has not been identified. This small painting captures the carefree day of several people in a green city park. Children play peacefully, watched over by their mothers, others stroll, and others read or converse while sitting on benches. The true protagonist is undoubtedly this wonderful garden with its lush vegetation, where the greenery stands out and creates a strong sense of harmony with the figures. The painting is distinguished by its clear post-Impressionist style, with visible, textured brushstrokes and a particular attention to the light filtering through the trees, creating distinctive shadows and volumes. The painting
