Description

Small and refined oil on panel painting by the Livorno painter Gino Romiti, a representative of the Livorno pictorial tradition linked to the post-Macchiaioli school. The artwork depicts a suggestive coastal landscape, likely from the Tuscan coast, rendered with an essential and poetic approach. The quick and textured brushstrokes define the land and vegetation, while the sky and sea are treated with soft, blended tones, creating a quiet and atmospheric scene. The small format composition is particularly decorative and well balanced, typical of the artist's more intimate production. Signed lower right. The painting is presented in a wooden frame with a dark mat enhancing its visual impact. Dimensions: Painting: 11.5 x 10 cm Frame: 27 x 29.5 cm Period: first half of the 20th
