Description

This solid oak wardrobe, crafted in the 1900s, embodies the functional elegance of the Belle Époque. Its architectural silhouette, punctuated by a pediment adorned with small balusters and finials, lends it a warm and welcoming presence from the moment you enter. In the center, an original beveled mirror reflects the light and structures the whole. Above it are four brass hooks, harmoniously arranged to hold coats, hats, or scarves. Two additional double hooks frame the mirror. Below, a discreet shelf provides a practical space for keys or gloves. The lower section features a brass bar, typical of wardrobes of this era, designed to hang umbrellas or walking sticks. The base incorporates a tray for collecting rainwater. The piece captivates with the quality of its oak, its warm patina, and its authentic charm.
