Description

Elegant Genoese eight-light chandelier dating to the late 19th century, featuring a finely carved and giltwood structure enriched with an abundant decoration of crystal drops and festoons. The central shaft, slender and turned, rises gracefully into sinuous arms typical of Ligurian production, supporting candle-shaped lights. The decorative scheme includes numerous cut crystal elements such as drops, faceted ovals, and rosettes, arranged in cascading swags and connected by ornamental chains, creating a lively and luminous effect. Some slightly amber-tinted crystal elements add warmth and depth to the overall appearance. The glass bobèches complete the composition with elegance. A representative example of late 19th-century Genoese production. Working electrical system. Period Late
