Description

A pair of oval oil paintings on canvas depicting two young noblewomen, with contemporary gilded frames, 18th century. The figures are half-length portraits in keeping with the style of 18th-century European aristocratic portraiture, with particular attention to the rendering of faces, complexions, and clothing. In the first portrait, the lady is depicted with an elaborate updo adorned with jewels, wearing a dress with a lace-trimmed neckline and a dark cloak draped over her shoulders. In the second painting, the young figure is depicted wearing a light-colored dress enriched with decorations and a red cloak, delicately holding a small bouquet of flowers, a symbol of grace and refinement.
