Description

The Washerwomen - Piero Todeschini, 1925 Oil on canvas
Provenance: Tuscany
Dimensions: framed: 86 × 54 cm; canvas only: 82 × 51 cm Description: A lively genre scene, signed and dated 1925, depicting a group of washerwomen captured along the bank of a watercourse, immersed in an everyday and authentic atmosphere. The work fully expresses the artist's pictorial language, characterized by a free and vibrant brushstroke, capable of conveying with immediacy the vitality of movement and the naturalness of the female figures. The composition, enlivened by reflections on the water and a luminous palette, reflects a sincere and poetic realism, typical of early twentieth-century Italian painting. A painting of great expressive freshness, ideal for both classical interiors and modern spaces. Artist's note: Piero Todeschini (1888-1945) was an Italian painter active in the first half of the twentieth century, best known for scenes of everyday life, landscapes, and popular subjects. His painting belongs to a lyrical realism, attentive to the rendering of light and the narration of simple life, with post-Impressionist and Verist influences. His works stand out for the spontaneity of the brushwork and for their ability to convey intimate and authentic atmospheres, making humble gestures and the human dimension of labor and rural life their protagonists.
