Description

Did you say colors? Did you say texture? This work brings together everything that made Pierre Ambrogiani, the flamboyant leader of the Provençal school of the 1950s, famous. Ears of corn, the extravagant shapes of several gourds in contrasting and decorative colors--this is a still life that is anything but lifeless, but rather full of life, charm, and originality. The work, in good condition, is presented in a simple black frame measuring 73 cm by 93 cm, while the canvas itself measures 60 cm by 81 cm. The work is signed in the paint in the lower right corner. A self-taught artist, influenced by Seyssaud and Chabaud, he was encouraged in his early days by Antoine Serra, who lent him his studio. In 1936, at the inauguration of the Maison de la Culture in Marseille, he met Picasso, who became one of his friends (the 1962 Homage to Picasso). A caricaturist for the newspaper "Le Radical," he achieved his first success in 1938 when the Marseille Museum of Fine Arts purchased one of his works. A very popular and particularly colorful figure in Marseille, Pierre Ambrogiani was a friend of Marcel Pagnol and Jean Giono. His studio was located on Cours d'Estienne d'Orves, near the Old Port. He traveled the countryside in his car, which served as his mobile studio, painting en plein air. He moved into a studio on Quai Rive Neuve in Marseille in 1943. Renowned for his vibrant palette, he painted landscapes of the South of France and still lifes of fish. He also engraved numerous plates to illustrate books. In 1962, he decorated the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Marseille with frescoes and stained glass windows. He designed a postage stamp, Saint-Paul-de-Vence, in 1961. Forced by illness and infirmity to stop painting in 1973, Pierre Ambrogiani died in 1985 and was buried in the Saint-Pierre cemetery in Marseille. His body was later transferred to the cemetery in Sault, Vaucluse.
