Description

A striking blue and white porcelain jardinière by Larucci for Christian Dior, made in Italy in the late 20th century. This elegant cachepot features a softly lobed, faceted body with an octagonal opening, a molded foot, and a beautifully balanced silhouette that feels both classic and decorative. The hand-painted floral decoration, executed in rich cobalt blue on a luminous white ground, evokes the charm of traditional European ceramic painting while remaining unmistakably chic and refined in the spirit of Christian Dior decorative objects. The fine blue line tracing the rim and base adds crisp definition and enhances the architectural quality of the form. The underside bears the handwritten mark "Larucci x Christian Dior," consistent with known examples identified in auction and secondary-market records as pieces made by Larucci for Christian Dior. This piece works beautifully as a jardinière, cachepot, or decorative centerpiece. It is both sculptural and practical, with a timeless blue-and-white palette that integrates effortlessly into traditional, neoclassical, or eclectic interiors. Condition is good overall, with minor wear consistent with age and use, including a few small rim nicks visible in the photographs. A highly decorative Dior-associated ceramic, combining Italian craftsmanship with a refined French decorative taste.
