Description

Charming oil on board depicting a bouquet of flowers in a brown earthenware vase, painted in a style that is at once simple, lively and highly decorative. The composition, animated by beautiful shades of blue, yellow and white, reveals a generous bouquet handled with a free and confident brushstroke, set against a restrained background that enhances the overall harmony of the piece. The work is signed Aerts in the lower left corner. It may be dated to around 1930-1950, in keeping with the spirit of mid-20th-century floral still life painting. This attractive work stands out for its spontaneous charm, fresh palette and pleasing decorative quality. It would make an elegant addition to a classic interior, a country house setting, or a more eclectic décor.
