Description

Bust of Marcus Junius Brutus, one of the protagonists in the assassination of Julius Caesar, specifically his son, tu quoque Filii! The face, rendered with classical restraint, features a short beard and firm features, in keeping with the neoclassical iconography of the republican hero. The figure is dressed in a draped paludamentum, whose ample and regular folds recall antique models. Biscuit porcelain, on its lapis blue porcelain base with a gold rim. Under the base, the signature of the Imperial Sèvres Manufactory in 1865 and gilding in 1867. A beautiful object of great neoclassical decoration, the subject is rare. We present it on an Italian marble base, perfectly suited to its dimensions, which completes the effect of a grand decoration or Grand Tour souvenir. For the base, see our other items. In
