Description

Description: This exquisite Japanese bronze vase or incense burner, dating from the Meiji period (1868-1912), displays a rich brown patina and elegant naturalistic decoration. The body is finely adorned with carved birds and floral motifs, enhanced with delicate gilt details, demonstrating the exceptional craftsmanship and artistic sophistication of late 19th-century Japanese metalwork. Resting on three tripod feet, it features an elegantly worked scalloped rim, while the handles, shaped like animal heads, add both sculptural character and symbolic richness.

Likely designed as a decorative incense burner or ornamental vase, this object embodies the refined aesthetic and technical mastery associated with Japanese decorative arts of the Meiji era.
