Description

A large Chinese bronze incense burner with rich polychrome enamel decoration, dating from the late 19th to early 20th century. The body features an archaic style inspired by ancient Chinese bronzes, composed of stylized friezes and geometric and zoomorphic motifs. The side handles depict stylized creatures holding movable rings. The lid is surmounted by a Foo dog, a traditional symbol of protection. The piece rests on an openwork base, lending it a striking decorative presence. A seal-shaped mark is present under the base. Dimensions: Height: 51 cm
