Description

Late 19th-century oil on canvas depicting a courtly scene after a work by Nicolas Lancret (1690-1743), an 18th-century French painter. The scene takes place in a wooded park. In the foreground, on the left, a couple is shown dancing. Two children hold a tray of petits fours. A flute player is also present. On the right, a fountain adorns the composition. In the background, other figures enliven the scene. The canvas has been cleaned. Two small restorations are visible on the back. The frame is later, made of gilded wood.
