Description

Windsor armchair known as the "Low Back" model, featuring armrests and a low, curved back, English work from the 19th century. The seat is carved from a single piece of solid elm, hollowed and worn by use, and shaped according to the anatomical form characteristic of these exceptional rustic chairs. The raw surface retains its original dry, golden patina, bearing witness to authentic wear and continuous use over nearly two centuries. The semicircular back consists of a bent rail in steam-curved ash, forming a broad arch designed to cradle the back. It is fitted with turned spindles and miniature baluster supports, joined by a pierced back splat decorated with scroll motifs inspired by simplified Chippendale models. The chair is flanked by two armrests descending in a gentle curve. The base stands on four slightly splayed, turned baluster legs with multiple ring moldings. H-shaped stretchers beneath the seat ensure the rigidity and stability of the whole. Condition: Remarkable unrestored patina. Very good state of preservation. Wear consistent with age and use. No restoration required. A chair of fine quality, with generous grain and robust construction. It stands as a testament to English provincial craftsmanship and to the taste for refined vernacular furniture.

Although fully functional, this armchair displays a distinct architectural elegance, emphasized by the restraint of its design and the quality of its turning.
