Description

A pair of English sterling silver candlesticks in the Georgian style, London 1772. The design is typical of 18th-century London: Corinthian column-shaped, they feature stepped bases with ribbed edges, bamboo-style stems, acanthus leaf finials, and removable ribbed mouthpieces. They bear the complete hallmarks around the base: the lion passant for 925 sterling silver, the crowned leopard's head for the city of London, the letter R for 1772, and the initials O.J. for the silversmith Orlando Jackson. The design is enriched with an embossed decoration on the base, a male head, and a dragon surmounted by a crown. Orlando Jackson, active in London from 1759, The Victoria and Albert Museum holds the tea service he created in 1772, in collaboration with James Young, for the actor David Garrick and his wife,
