Description

Medieval paving tile with fleur-de-lis - Normandy, 13th-14th century
Rare medieval paving tile in terracotta, decorated with an elegant fleur-de-lis. This type of decorative tile is characteristic of workshops in northern France, and this example is most likely from a Norman workshop. The motif features a finely stylized fleur-de-lis, with detailed petals and visible pistils, typical of 13th- and 14th-century production. This tile testifies to the refinement of medieval decorative art, where these elements participated in the embellishment of prestigious residences as well as religious buildings. A fine, well-preserved example, offering a clear reading of the motif. Dimensions:- Side: 12.3 cm- Thickness: 2.3 cm
