Representing A Canal in Venice, painted in 1905. Antonio Piatti, 1875-1960, Italian painter, son of sculptor Domenico Piatti. He was introduced to sculpture by his father at an early age, working in the family studio from the age of twelve. He then perfected his skills with Leonardo Bistolfi in Turin, before turning to painting. At 17, he enrolled at the drawing school of the Technical Institute in Cuneo, where his family had moved, attending classes in Brera as a pupil of Cesare Tallone. While still a student, in 1901 he took part in the first art exhibition in Varese, winning a silver medal in Turin. In 1903,
