Description

Pair of handsome oak doors in the Louis XV style. Probably 18th-century in terms of the visible joints in the counterpane. The lock escutcheons and hinges (large plugs) are original and also resemble creations from this period. Representations of sprigs and ears of wheat carved in the mass on the joint cover. A central medallion shows ploughed earth on which some young plants are beginning to sprout. In the middle of the two central panels are inlaid flowers (boxwood and ebony). Ideal for adorning a dressing room integrated into a new wall. Dimensions: width = 61 + 79 cm; width between axes of the 2 plugs = 143 cm; height = 148 cm; thickness = 28 mm 480 EUR incl.
