Description

Rare and elegant pair of pitcher vases, attributed to Jérôme Massier (1850-1916), an emblematic figure of Vallauris art ceramics in the late 19th century.These spectacular pieces perfectly illustrate the Art Nouveau aesthetic, with a slender, organic line evoking a growing plant form. Each vase is adorned with a stylized female figure in relief, integrated into the very structure of the object, in a graceful, sensual posture typical of the iconography of the period.The glaze features a subtle nuanced gradation from celadon green to mordant brown, with dripping effects and natural variations that testify to mastered craftsmanship. The fluted base reinforces the plant-like aspect, while the slender neck accentuates the verticality and elegance of the whole.Each piece is unique for its slight
